What is a transition? Video transition is a post-processing technique used in video or movie editing to connect one frame to another. Often when . mov file consists of only one file, then such a file can be easily converted into one, as, for example, when watching movies on a DVD player. When viewing files that contain multiple video files, sometimes you need to merge them together. This chapter describes a number of ways to connect movies, such as transition to video, transition to audio, transition from one frame to another, transition from one scene to another, and transition from one frame to another. All this is very easy to do by watching the video tutorial.
